Green Corner: Low Emissivity Glass

Are there rooms in your house that are unbearably hot when the sun is shining in through the windows?

In the past, standard laminated, tinted glass has been used to help eliminate the issues of solar radiation and "hot spots" in your home. However, the tint on the glass blocks a lot of the good, natural light that you do want in your home to keep it bright inside. BCB Homes has been using a product that allows much of the solar radiation to be blocked from entering your home, yet allowing a lot of the natural light from the sun to enter and give you bright living spaces. The product is Low-Emissivity (Low-E) glass.

Photos of homes with Low-E Glass installed in the windows and doors.

The Low-E glass is proven to block three to four times more solar radiation than that of standard laminated, tinted glass. The Low-E glass eliminates "hot spots" in your home throughout the day and protects your furniture, carpets, curtains and wall coverings from fading and keeping them beautiful for years. When Low-E glass is installed into a home's windows and doors, it provides the highest levels of year-round comfort and energy savings.

It is also estimated that you can reduce your energy bills by one-third by simply using low-emissivity glass. The glass comes in all residential sizes, thickness and shapes, as well as being fully customizable for your home and able to meet the impact requirements. Call BCB Homes today to have any questions answered about Low-E glass and to get an estimate to install the Low-E glass into your home!
